Warrant Out for the Man's Arrest on Complaint of Husband She Had Deserted—Clark Locked Up

It is believed by Prosecutor Robert Koester, of Hackensack, N. J., that when Coroner Curry holds the inquest on the death of the woman known as Mrs. Mary Clark to-morrow it will be found that her supposed husband, Albert Clark, of Middletown, N. Y., stood calmly by and saw an Erie express freight train kill her at Waldwick because he feared prosecution for bigamy. Clark is detained in the Hackensack jail as a witness.

Prosecutor Koester has received information from Middletown that Clark eloped from that place on July 28 with the woman, he leaving behind a wife and she a husband and two children.

According to the story, the woman was the wife of Reuben Welton, of Rutherford, near Middletown. She eloped with Clark, thinking he was wealthy. Although Clark comes from a rich family, he had only a few dollars when he came to New York with wife No. 2. He expected to get money from his aunt, Mrs. Annie Day, in this city, but he could not find her.

Start Home Afoot.

The couple started for home on foot, their last cent being gone, walking on the Erie Railroad tracks.

At Rutherford, Clark received a letter from his brother warning him not to return to Middletown as warrants were out for the arrest of both himself and the woman. This letter, found in Clark's pocket after the tragedy, was the first hint to Mr. Koester that things were not as they seemed. The warrant was obtained by Welton, the husband whom the woman deserted.

Engineer Donnelly, whose locomotive killed the supposed Mrs. Clark, declares that the man made absolutely no effort to get the woman from in front of the train, but stood close to the rails and deliberately watched the engine run down the woman. Donnelly denies that Clark pushed the woman on the track. He says he was amazed at the sight and expected every second to see the man make some move toward rescuing the woman from her peril, but he did not.

Clark in Denial.

Clark denies the engineer's story. He declares he tried to save his wife and was struggling with her when the train struck her. His own escape was narrow, he says, as he was knocked aside by the locomotive pilot.

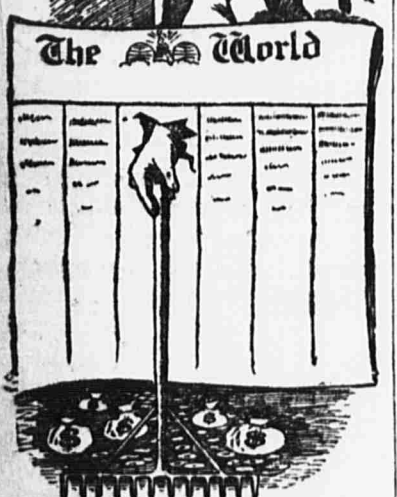

Both Engineer Donnelly and Clark will be witnesses at the inquest, and the Coroner's jury will have to choose between their two stories.

Clark has become a nervous wreck since the accident.

"I did not stand by idly and see my wife killed," he says. "I tried to save her."

The Man with the Hoc— to-morrow. There'll be a picture of that famed personage.

But to-day the man with the rake,

The picture tells its own story. But it may not be just plain to every one where the money he is raking in came from. Confidentially, it came from a wisely placed Business Opportunity advt.

For Sale, Good Will and Bus. Opp. advertisements are first cousins.

In this morning's World there were seventy-three For Sale and Business Opportunity advertisements, each a money-saver for those who seek bargains, and each a money-maker for those who seek investment.

This morning's offerings are as interesting as usual. A partner with $100 is sought; another with $300. Grocery stores, confectioners, bakeries, saloons, etc., are offered. You can buy a typewriter, a desk, household furniture, jewelry, pianos, organs, etc.

It pays to read World For Sales and Business Opportunities every day.

FOUGHT BURGLAR ON FIRE ESCAPE

Jersey City Policeman Follows
A Supposed Thief Up Ladder and Grapples with Him at the Third Floor.

After a fight on a platform of a fire-escape three stories in the air during which a supposed burglar tried to throw him over the railing to the street, Policeman Lionel Cleverly, of Jersey City, subdued his man and led him a captive to the police station.

For several weeks the contractors erecting the six-story parochial school building for St. Patrick's parish at Ocean and Beach avenues, Jersey City, have missed copper wire and tools from the structure and so informed the police. Cleverly, whose name is considered especially appropriate, was assigned to catch the thief. At 5 o'clock this morning he saw a man sneak into the building, reach the fire-escape and mount to the sixth floor. The policeman followed him. But the night stick "Come down out of that!" yelled Cleverly, after true police parlance.

"I will," said the man. Cleverly went up and the supposed burglar came down. They met on the landing of the fire-escape at the third floor and the man-higher-up kicked the policeman in the face. But Cleverly seized his legs and pulled him down, at the same time discharging his revolver in the air. The stranger and the policeman grappled on the narrow balcony and strained in a furious struggle, in which the stranger tried to hurl the policeman over the balcony. But the night stick triumphed and the man, beaten into submission, was led off to the Ocean avenue station, where he gave his name as George Ackerman, saying he was a two-year-old and registered at the Palmer House, on the Bowery, Manhattan.

He misjudged the distance and fell into the water, closely followed by four men who tried the jump. Three of the men and the boy could swim and they easily kept afloat. John Huges and Daniel Logan, who were on the pier, leaped into the water.

The three men who could swim yelled to them to save the boy and the other man. A boat had put out in the meantime and the three men were picked up and taken ashore. They were little the worse for their experience.

The boy was swept out into the current, but after a few strong strokes he was thrown to the pier. Logan sought out the man floundering in the water. The drowning man seized his rescuer by the leg and it was with difficulty that Logan shook him off.

Just when Logan was in a fair way to save the man an excited woman on the deck of the barge threw a life preserver and struck the man on the head. Logan saw the struggle was useless and the man slipped from his grasp and sank.

The police dragged the river for several hours, but the body was not found. Many inquiries were made in the crowd, but the police were unable to find any one who had seen a friend or relative. The drowned man was about thirty-five years old and had dark hair and mustache.

Dr. Ettore dressed his wounds, and as he refused to make a complaint the motorman and conductor of the car were permitted to go. He was taken home.

MANAGER WAMBOLD ACCUSED OF BIGAMY

The Assistant Director of New York and Amsterdam Theatres is Arrested on Complaint of Blanche Martin, an Actress

When it was announced yesterday morning that the New York and Amsterdam Theatres had been closed by the police in default of $100,000 in a charge of bigamy made by Blanche Martin, an actress, Wambold had no comment when arrested in the Yorkville hotel and taken to the police station.

Mrs. Martin gave a dramatic portrait of her marriage with Wambold and the alleged discovery that he had another wife, who lived within three blocks of the boarding-house where the young actress took her after their marriage. She appeared in court in a striking suit of white linen and took a large picture hat.

She showed the Magistrate a marriage certificate to show that she and Wambold were married on Aug. 3, 1907, by the Rev. Hugh McDermod, at No. 207 East One Hundred and Sixteenth street. She produced a Board of Health certificate to show that Wambold was married to Mrs. Helen Kervon on Feb. 14, 1908, by the Rev. Dr. G. A. Dykes, in St. Augustine's chapel, at No. 106 East Houston street.

Mrs. Martin said that Wambold had taken her to a boarding-house at No. 207 East Fourteenth street, while his other wife lived at No. 409 East Eleventh street.

Wambold was arrested at a hotel in Liberty, Sullivan County, where he has been spending the summer with Mrs. Wambold No. 1. Mrs. Wambold No. 1 did not appear in court.

Blanche Martin, who came from Manchester, Mass., has had a leading part with the "Vanity Fair" and Crack-erjack companies.

GEORGIA SIDES WITH ROOSEVELT

Gov. Terrell Indorses President's Views on Lynching and Says Speedy Trials Are the Only Preventative.

ATLANTA, Ga., Aug. 10.—Gov. Terrell yesterday indorsed the President's views on lynching, saying that the only preventative was speedy trials.

"I think President Roosevelt is on the right line and I am in hearty accord with the views he expresses. The majority of the law should be applied, but at the same time there should be a prompt and ready trial of the offender in the case of that crime which most appalls the people. The speed of the trial should not be delayed by technicalities."

"We have an amended our criminal laws in Georgia as to have speedy trials by a jury of twelve in order to prevent a technicality of the law to try criminals."

"No law, however strictly enforced, will absolutely stop lynchings for the crime aimed at, but speedy trials tend to lessen the number and practically serve as a preventative of lynchings for other offenses."

It is interesting in this connection to note that the number of lynchings in the North and Northwest of late have brought forth such an expression from the press, while the number of them in the South has been as few within the same period as to attract little or no attention.
